

Thomas Ksiazek a certified athletic trainer based out of North Platte, Nebraska where he is the head athletic trainer at North Platte high school and provides outreach services to surrounding schools. Thomas has great passion for his profession and the involvement of sports medicine in rodeo. He is a member of the Great Plains Health Rodeo Sports Medicine Team. He has covered various levels of rodeo including Regional PRCA, Mid-States Rodeo Association, Great Plains Region and regional high school rodeos. Thomas has been a Justin Boots Sports Medicine assistant since 2018.

Thomas graduated from Wayne State College with a bachelor's degree in Exercise Science in 2015. He went on to graduate with his Master's in Athletic Training from South Dakota State University working with Division 1 athletics in 2017. Through his schooling Tom has successfully become a published author in the field of concussion research. Tom and his wife Jamie currently reside in North Platte, Nebraska and enjoy going back to Eastern Nebraska to help on the family farm.